Three years, two careers!

Students who are interested in taking both the Business Management and Supply Chain Management programs can do so under the dual offering, which can lead toward a path to two associate degrees in three years.

The dual degree option maximizes synergies between the Business Management and Supply Chain Management Programs through the sharing of resources, such as faculty expertise, facilities and community programs. Students taking Business Management and Supply Chain Management will graduate with additional skills making them more marketable to both industries.

The dual option features an abbreviated schedule, a diverse environment, and enhanced opportunities for collaboration and networking.

The Business Management and Supply Chain Management option totals 88 credits, and it is structured to be completed over three years.

- Prepare for jobs such as:
 - Business Management: assistant manager, production specialist, account coordinator, business development specialist, branch manager.
 - Supply Chain Management: purchasing coordinator, junior buyer, supply chain analyst, logistics coordinator, inventory coordinator, import/export specialist.
- Practice skills through simulated workplace projects, including supplier evaluation and selection, customer loyalty programs and creating marketing plans.
- Gain exposure to current industry trends through projects and guest speakers from well-respected companies.
